

Presents:

The Quest for Scope Three

Once upon a time, there was a Head of Sustainability for Your Company Inc, named Tig.

One day he was researching Scope 3 emissions and its reporting process.
He became frustrated by the complexity and pushed himself away from his desk but pushed too hard, fell backward, and then everything went dark.

When he woke up, he found himself in a strange land “Welcome to the Kingdom of ESG!”, shouted a man in wizard robes,
“I’m Zed, you must be Tig.”

Tig was confused, “How’d you know that?”, he asked “Well, Tig, I’m a wizard you see. I am able to utilize the magic of sustainability which gives life to this world”, Zed explained

Tig stood there still very confused about what was happening. “Your arrival in this realm was foretold in the Prophecy of Figs, which says that in the Kingdom of ESG’s darkest hour, a stranger from another realm would utilize the power of sustainability to save this land from the evil forces that rule over it.”

Tig was still dazed and wondered how hard he must have hit his head to be imagining all of this. “Look Mister, I have no idea what you’re talking about so I’m just going to close my eyes, click my heels together, and wake up from this lunacy.”

Zed informed Tig, “In order for you to return home, you will first have to restore enough sustainability magic to the realm to power your trip.”

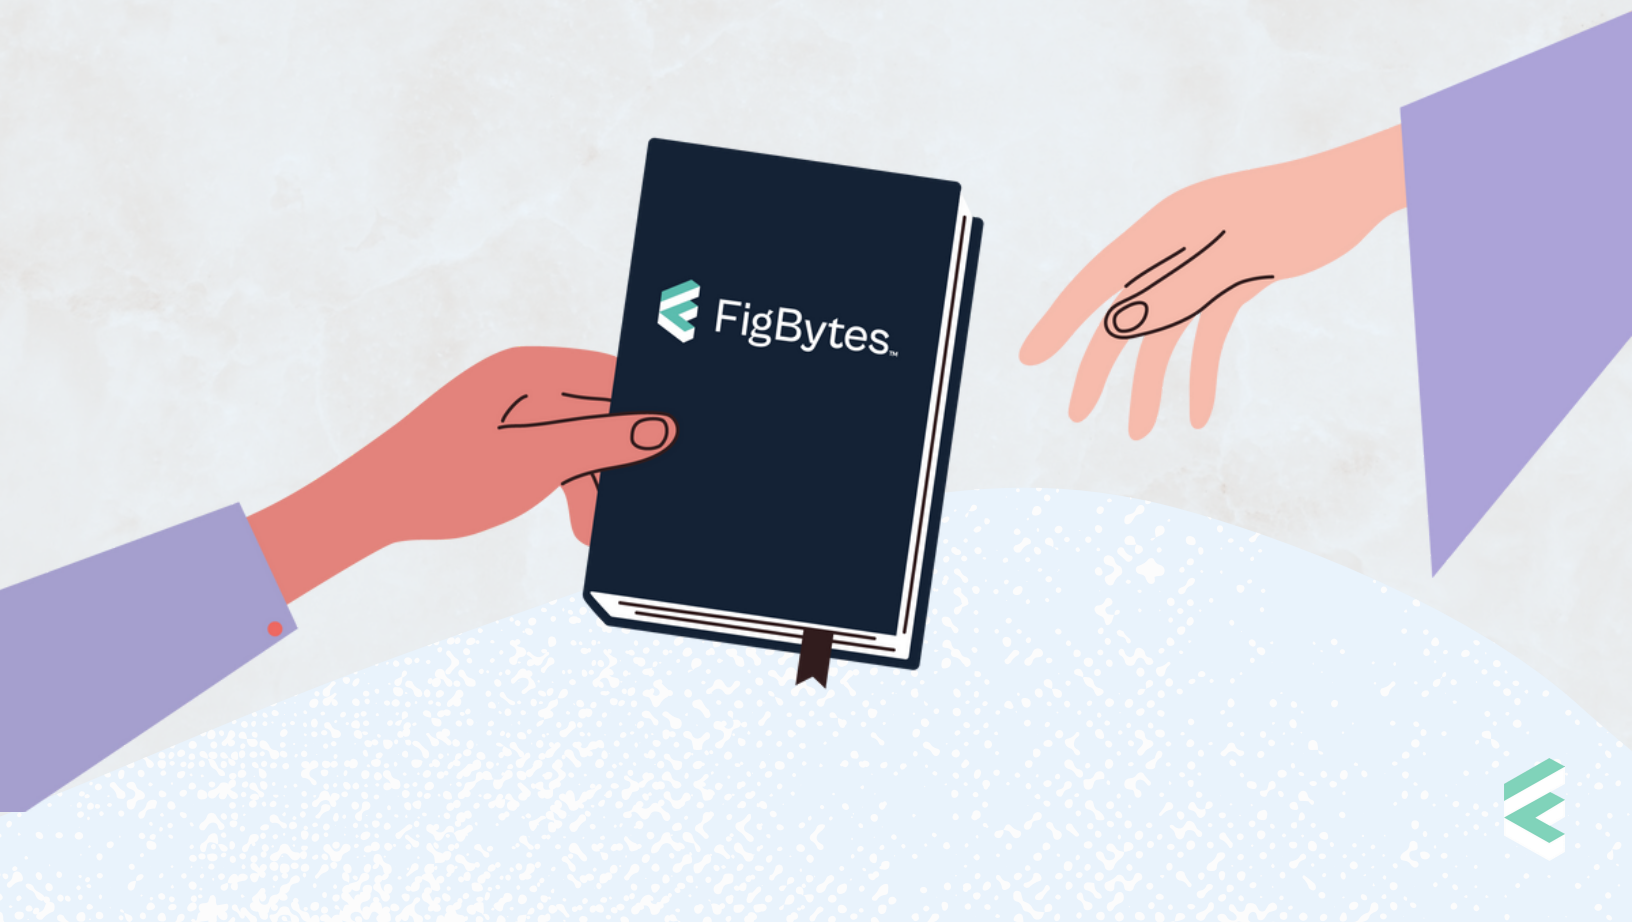

Tig realized he wasn't able to wake himself from this delusion, so he decided to play along until he was able to. "Okay... how do I restore the magic of sustainability to this realm?", Tig asked sarcastically.

"There are many ways to restore or even generate sustainability magic, but to have the amount you will need to return home, you must restore the River of Scope 3 to its former glory by uniting the Suppliers' Guild, the Value Chain Clan, and the League of Stakeholders," Zed explained.

Zed gave Tig the FigBytes Magic Book of ESG, "This book will guide you on your quest and assist you in restoring the magic of sustainability."

Tig was still very confused and quite reluctant but accepted the book nonetheless.
He didn't know another way out of this nightmare.

He opened the book of magic and found a map of the Kingdom of ESG. According to the map, his first stop would be the League of Stakeholders.

Tig headed out on his journey
down the Net-Zero Pathway toward the land of the League of Stakeholders.

During his journey, he encountered a group of goblins who had trapped a centaur in a net. One of the goblins noticed Tig and threatened him, “Find another way or you’ll be next.”

Unsure of what to do, Tig took out the book of FigBytes to see if there was another path or if the book had any advice for dealing with goblins. Seriously, what was happening here?!

Tig opened the book but before he could even read a single sentence, the goblins shouted, “He wields the power of FigBytes... RUN!”. The group of goblins ran away so Tig freed the centaur from the net.

“Thank you, kind stranger, for your assistance, my name is Fred, prince of Custo-Mers. How can I repay your kindness?” asked the centaur.

“That’s unnecessary, I didn’t do anything to help. They seemed scared of this...”, Tig explained while showing Fred the book of FigBytes. Tig also shared the details of how he arrived here and his quest.

“That explains it! Those goblins are from the Caverns of Chaotic Carbon Data, they are scared of sustainability magic which is what that book of yours is powered by. But it seems like it’s both of our lucky days. My father is on the high council of the League of Stakeholders, I can take you to him to repay my debt and help you on your quest,” Fred explained to Tig.

Tig happily accepted Fred’s help and the two continued down the Net-Zero Pathway.

When they arrive Tig is introduced to Fred's father, Craig the King of Custo-Mers, and the other members of the council, Janice the Queen Bee of the Labor Force, Elias the Emperor of Executives, and Ellen the Ruler of the Externals.

Tig shared his quest with the council and Fred explained how Tig had saved him. "So can you help me restore the River of Scope 3?" Tig asked of the council.

"We would be honored to help but sadly we do not have the resources necessary to both maintain the River of Scope 3 once it has been restored and protect it from goblin attacks." King Craig explained

"But the wizard Zed said this was the only way to restore enough sustainability magic to the Kingdom of ESG for me to return home." Tig expressed. Then he remembered that he had the book of FigBytes. He opened the book and found a spell that could help the League of Stakeholders to restore, maintain, and protect their portion of the River of Scope 3.

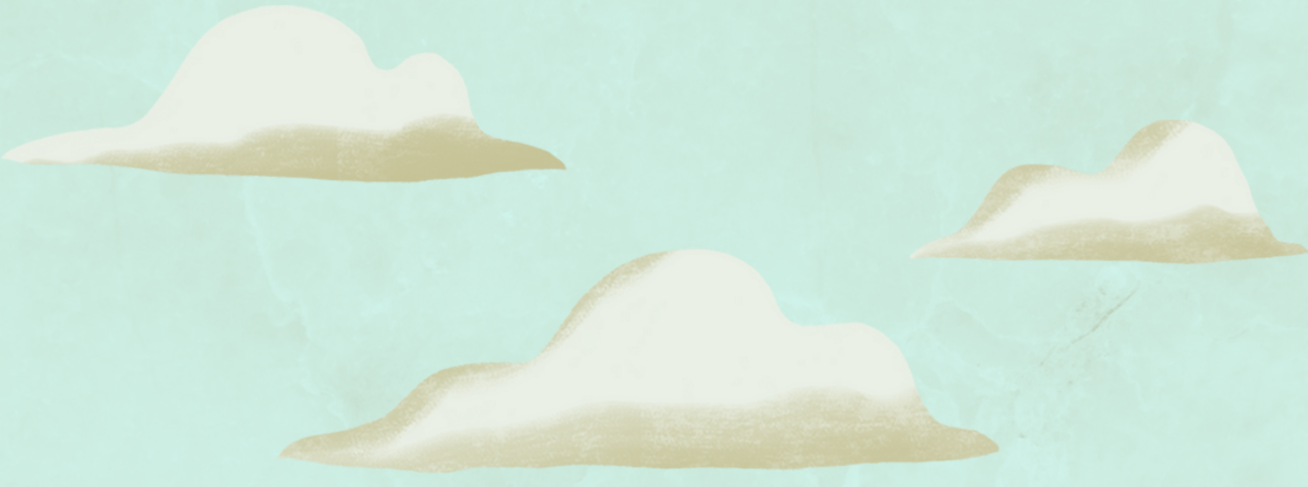

“This spell from the book of FigBytes will help you build a system that automates most of the work needed and protects you from the goblins of the Caverns of Chaotic Carbon Data. The only ingredient required is your cooperation with the Suppliers’ Guild and the Value Chain Clan.”
Tig explained

The high council considered Tig’s proposal and decided that if he could convince the Suppliers’ Guild and the Value Chain Clan to be on board with the plan then so would the League of Stakeholders. Fred offered to join Tig on his quest and they headed back on their way down the Net-Zero Pathway.

Tig and Fred crossed the Fields of Green Finance and climbed the Mountain of Corporate Governance as they made their way to the lands of the Suppliers' Guild.

When they arrived, they were brought before the leaders of the Suppliers' Guild. Tig explained his quest and asked the leaders of the Suppliers' Guild if they would help restore the River of Scope 3. "We would be happy to help but the Ravens of Regulations continuously disrupt our efforts to maintain the river. We have tried different methods but have not been able to keep up with them.", explained one of the leaders of the Suppliers' Guild.

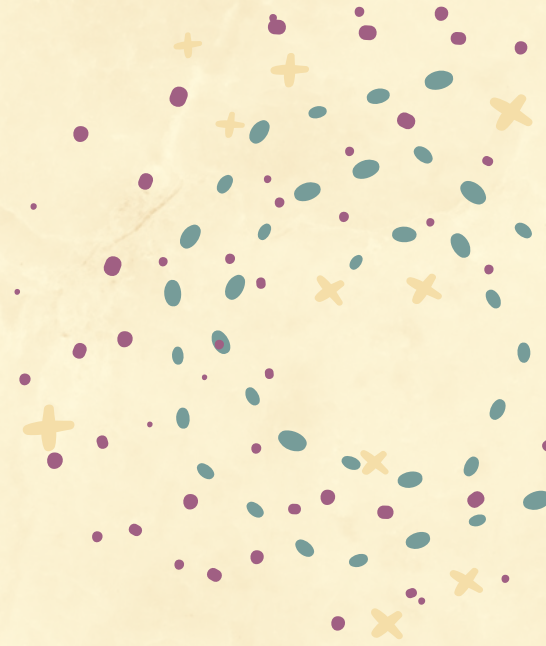

Tig without saying a word opened the book of FigBytes and found a spell that would help the Suppliers' Guild deal with their bird problem.

“This spell will help you predict and prepare for anything the Ravens of Regulations can throw at you. It only requires that you cooperate with the League of Stakeholders and the Value Chain Clan to maintain the River of Scope 3 and the magic of sustainability that the river provides,” Tig explained

The leaders of the Suppliers' Guild were thrilled and agreed to do their part to restore and maintain the River of Scope 3. They also provided Tig and Fred with a boat to cross the Sea of Stewardship to reach the realm of the Value Chain Clan.

Tig and Fred soon arrived on the shores of the Value Chain Clan realm, where they were greeted by a group of soldiers who escorted them to the throne room of the ruling committee.

Tig explained his quest to the ruling committee and asked for their help to restore the River of Scope 3.

“I’m afraid we cannot help you on your quest, Sir Tig. Our portion of the River of Scope 3 has been claimed by the Dragons of Disparate Data.”, explained one of the members of the ruling committee.

Before they could continue, Tig opened the book of FigBytes and found a spell that would empower the Value Chain Clan’s to slay their dragon problem.

“This spell will give you control over the Dragons of Disparate Data and allow you to use them to maintain the River of Scope 3 for all time. It only requires that you cooperate with the League of Stakeholders and the Suppliers’ Guild to ensure the river and the magic it provides are preserved,” Tig explained to the ruling committee of the Value Chain Clan.

Excited to be relieved of their dragon problem, the ruling committee of the Value Chain Clan agreed to Tig's conditions and accepted the responsibility to work with the League of Stakeholders and the Suppliers' Guild to ensure the River of Scope 3 is sustained for the good of the entire Kingdom of ESG.

With the River of Scope 3 restored and the Suppliers' Guild, the Value Chain Clan, and the League of Stakeholders united in its protection, the wizard Zed appeared.

"Congratulations Tig! You did it! You've helped bring the magic of sustainability back to these lands by completing your quest. There is now more than enough magic to send you home and protect the Kingdom of ESG for years to come," Zed said.

Tig said his goodbyes to Fred as the wizard Zed waved his magic staff and performed the spell that would send Tig home.

There was a bright flash of light and Tig woke up back in his office thinking it had all been a dream...or had it.

The End

Are you ready to tackle your own Quest for Scope 3?

FigBytes can help! Our ESG Insight Platform makes it easy to collect, manage and report on Scope 3 emissions across your value chain.

Click here to book a meeting with one of our FigBytes experts .